THERE is a play at the Martin Bec There is a play at the Martin Beck might say. Even the professional critics vowed it was good, tho those gentlemen detect various flaws in its historionic anatomy. As for myself, if I like something I have a habit of glossing over little defects. And "Spread Eagle" with American imperialism in Mexico as the theme is as hot a potato as a patriot ever had shoved into his mitt.

TWO ex-warriors who occupied the same sector of a battle area in France are chatting in the office of Mr. Henderson, the big Wall Street broker. One of the two is a newspaper man; the other is the big broker's amanuensis. The latter had his lesson and was sharing it with the reporter, who lived up to the common conception of the typical newshound. He wanted an interview with Henderson which he was willing to write, provided the great man permitted the use of his name. That would be plenty.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 6.—With the bituminous coal lock-out still keeping about 200,000 men idle, and the Pennsylvania constabulary still reported breaking up picket lines there, the miners settled down to what looks like a long fight.

The Indiana strip mine owners may settle, temporarily, on the basis of the Jacksonville scale, and let their men go back to work until the rest of the field settles the wage rate.

Conference

THE big man worked for a dollar a year during the war and made a fortune out of it. Every time a shell shrieked from the sector in which those lads suffered it rang up 37 cents on Mr. Henderson's cash register. The man who now supplied Henderson with his business brains also worked for him on the western front. The dialogue between the reporter and the broker's clerk is eartickling.

Conference On.

A meeting takes place at Terre Heute, tomorrow, between operators of strip mines and union officials. Any decision made there will affect but a small part of the men out, even in Indiana, and none of the strip miners outside of the state are involved. Strip mining is a special sort of work, more like excavating or quarrying than tunnel and shaft mining, and is not applicable to all American coal fields.

ilike excavating or quarrying than tunnel and shaft mining, and is not applicable to all American coal fields.

Lewis Won't Attend.

John L. Lewis, International president of the National Civic Federation, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor and head of the special committee appointed to investigate the Furriers' Union, it is still a mystery how the newspapers of the union, and especially for the present active of the union, and especially son liberty until he was assured of $650,000 to pull off a revolution against the Mexican government. No sooner had he left than the son of an ex-American president came in on the track of a job which he got, starting in at the bottom on a salary of $5,000 a year. Of course he took the job to prove to Miss Henderson that he would and could make good, etc. He did, and almost got murdered by her father's general. And strange to say that is just what Mr. Henderson to say that is just what Mr. Henderson wanted to happen the of course he was not aware his daughter loved the victim. Why? Because the American people would never stand for the murder of the son of an ex-president.

HENDERSON'S general did the job he got paid for and the ex-president's son got shot. War was declared. Now, there is where the authors of "S, sead Eagle" spring something new. They introduce a newspaper editor on the radio who does his one minute speech in four-minute fashion and pictures of soldiera marching to the front and kissing wives and babies are flashed on the screen. Mr. Henderson becomes chairman of the national defense committee and goes to the border in his private car. Generals fawn on him. He is America.

The expresident's son is found safe and sound but talking like a man out of his wits. In fact he knows that Henderson senh him toget killed and he is going to spill the beans. The big patriot is shocked and is about to collapse when his amanuensis comes to his rescue, frightens the wits out of the victim who goes off and marries the naiden. Then the big man's flunkey joins the army after giving the broker a tongue thrashing. The curtain falls with the star-spangled banner playing, and the broker's flunkey ordering his boss: "Stand up you son of a bo-." Perhaps it is satire.

SACCO AND VANZETTI SHALL NOT DIE!

The supreme court of the state of Massachusetts has cked the whole world.

It was not only the most conscious section of the working class which knew Sacco and Vanzetti had been convicted by a frame-up of a crime of which they were innocent but every honest and intelligent person felt that the Massachusetts court, in the face of overwhelming evidence to the contrary, would not dare to find them guilty.

Class justice, the justice that American capitalism measures out to workers who have incurred its enmity, has triumphed-for the moment. It has triumphed at tremendous cost to the system which it protects against the poor who do the work of the world.

Who is so foolish as to say now that capitalist courts are impartial?

Our task, and to this task The DAILY WORKER and the Workers (Communist) Party for which it speaks pledges every ounce of its energy, is to open the jail doors and free Sacco and Vanzetti—our class brothers who have been made to suffer a living death for more than six years. The capitalist class of America in general and aristocracy of the Bay State in particular have tortured these innocent workers long

All appeals to the so-called natural virtues—honesty, mercy, etc.—have failed. The supreme court of Massachusetts has spit in the face of all who protested.

This time no half-way measures will do. There must be brought into being the most powerful machinery for protest and action that the long list of persecutions of workers has produced in the United States. The whole country must be made to ring with the shame of Massachusetts.

In every foreign land the masses must know the truthat in the United States it is still possible to legally murder innocent workers who have suffered already the anguish and despair of a thousand ordinary lives.

Unite to save Sacco and Vanzetti. No new trial demand this time. These workers are innocent and they must be freed. They belong to the labor movement and there they must take their place once more-and soon.

Sacco and Vanzetti shall not die in the electric chair at the hands of the enemies of the American labor movement.

SOCIALIST CHIEF FOR IMPERIALISM IN PORTO RICO

Iglesias Is Secretary of Meeting Held to Discuss Pan-American F. of L.

By J. NEVARES SAGER. (Special To The DAILY WORKER.) SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, March 25. —During the session of the Porto Rican senate, held March 22-27, the Rican senate, held March 22-27, the senate president, Antonio Barcelo, in outlining his intended discourse before the visiting Secretary of War Davis, at the official banquet, suggested that he intended, in addition to laying bare the problems of Porto Rico, to condemn the Latin-American-policies of the U. S., initiated by Roosevelt with the rape of Colombia, and pursued at present in relation to Nicaragua, by supporting a hireling, Diaz, against the actual government sustained by the people of Nicaragua. Senator Santiago Iglesias of the Pan-American Federation of Labor hastily intervened, and warned Barcelo, "You would assume a serious responsibility in confronting the secretary of war regarding the policies which his government may pursue in

INDIA ENTERING NEW PHASE OF FREEDOM FIGHT

Question of Leninism

BOMBAY, Feb. (By Mail).-Signs show that in 1927 we are entering on a revolutionary phase of the class-conscious political organization of the Indian proletariat and its emer-gence in its role as the leader of the national-revolutionary movement.
These signs are the visible fruits of the underground activities of the In-dian Communist Party, carried on under exceptional hard conditions of tionary orientation of the masses of of events in China

During the last two or three years, the Indian proletariat has gone through a severe training in the school of industrial action in the shape of many hard-fought strikes and it has reached a certain degree of political maturity which was absent in the first post-war revolutionof political maturity which was nosent in the first post-war revolutionary period of 1921-1922. This is evidenced by the fact that revolutionary

The Trade Union Reform Bill—The Inevitable Consequence of Imperialistic Labor Leadership

The British ruling class, having smashed the general strike and beaten the coal miners by means of force and treachery of reformist leaders procured by the government, is taking the next of error in either direction. step in the general attack on the labor movement of which the mobilization of the full power of capitalism against the British workers was the first move.

The "trade union reform" bill which will be introduced in the House of Commons next Monday has two principal features:

1.) It outlaws not only general strikes but sympathetic strikes as well and makes union members responsible for damages to business and property claimed by the capitalists as a result of

As the British Communist Party and the National Minority Movement pointed out at the time the general strike was called brought off, the disgraceful surrender of the leadership would be followed ants to the Kuomintang in great by demands for the labor movement to give up its arms-the strike weapon and mass support of the labor party.

MacDonald and his crew, who led the workers to defeat, are now confronted with a rising tide of mass resentment brought into being by the public proof of the hypocrisy of these leaders in trying to deceive the workers into believing that there was any difference between British government and British imperialism.

The theory of the impartiality of British government as an institution was severely shaken by the course it followed in the general strike and miners' strike. It has been shattered by its advocacy of the destructive bill aimed at the trade unions.

More rapidly than ever the masses are turning to the Communist Party and the left wing in the labor party is challenging MacDonald's leadership with George Lansbury mentioned as his successor. That Lansbury took a leading part in the recent Conference of Colonial Peoples in Brussels, an international expression of the worldwide revolt against imperialism, has a deep significance when taken in connection with the drive on the living standds and organizations of the British working class and the fail

WITHOUT the disorganization work carried on among the industrial workers and peasants by the trade unions, the Peoples Armies would have been unable to secure the series of sweeping victories which gave them control of the Yangtax valley.

all this bunkem about the camps that stares us in our face wherever that stares us in our face wherever we go, comes at a time when Chinese workers and peasants are slaughtered under false pretenses.

Militarism is a problem that is of paramount importance to the youth for it is the youth that acts as cannon fodder in wars. It is no accident that U. S. Steel Corporation, and other large industrial corporations, that are directly concerned in fostering the idea of war and the exploitation of the young worker should endorse the Citizens Military Training Camps. The C. M. T. C's are being used as tom-toms for a war that may at any moment break out against China and Mexico.

The camps are being used for still another purpose which in the class on citizenship means loyalty to your boss and scab on your fellow workers. The answer of the young worker and student must be a complete rejection of these war training camps.

BOOKS

A JOURNALIST LOOKS AT CHINA.

Young China. Lewis Gannett. The Nation. $.25.

It is difficult to get the feel of awakening China from garbled newspaper stories, statistics or theses. China tends to become for the average well-informed reader a huge chess board; growth versus reaction; little war lords moved from box to box by the imperialist powers, etc.

Gannett, a brilliant journalist, expresses the movement in human terms.

Take the industrialization of China. Here is what it means expressed in human terms. "All about the industrial outskirts of the great Western city which is the pride of foreigners in Shanghai one may see the disreputable sheds, built of bamboo, mud, lime, straw. Six or eight people live in one-room floorless huts, through whose flimsy roofs the rain leaks in a storm; whose walls, falling or riddled with holes, affords no privacy. There is no drainage, no lavoratories; garbage heaps and cesspools—or rather cess-puddles—surround the hovels. A big rain floods the whole neighborhood and the ragged babies wade about covered with mud and filth."

"Walking through the dimly lit mill-rooms one sees baskets containing children, sleeping or awake between the whirring, clacking machines. Sometimes a tot of two or three sits cheerfully playing with cotton waste in the aisles through which the foreman guides the visitor. Girls a little older help their mothers tend the rows of spindles and the deftness of five-year-old fingers is amazing.

"Often the children are brought in from the country by a contractor, who follows disaster like vultures and pays starving parents about a dollar a month for a contract which amounts to slavery; the girls live for years in his compound, eating his food, or in factories, eating factory rice, working sometimes fifteen and sixteen hours a day, and often sleeping on the floor beneath their machines."

The report of the hard-boiled Shanghai Child Labor Commission made in 1924 contains all this and more. But reports are as a rule lifeless. . . . Gannett does better at reporting than at an analysis of the forces back of the revolution, of class alignments, etc. He sees that industrialization of China "has upset her old equilibrium," but it seems that he fails to grasp the implications of China's industrialization.

He seems surprised at the revolutionary role of the Chinese bourgeoisie. He says, "The Chinese employer straddles the class issue. He does not identify himself with the employing classes of the world. Race consciousness her taken the place of class consciousness."

The Chinese middle classes, like the middle classes of India, Mexico and other colonial countries, "do not identify themselves with the employing class of the rest of the world" for very definite class reasons. Noble notions of race unity or Chinese byotherhood have little to do with their position in the revolution.

Tariff restrictions imposed upon China by foreign industrialists extraterritorial rights, fat concessions handed out to foreign plunderers by the Manchus and Yuan Shi Kai, as well as natural antagonism to foreign competitors flooding China with cheap manufactured goods, have forced the middle classes (with the exception of the compradore element) into a revolutionary role.

How long the Chinese middle classes will remain with the revolution is open to question. Judging by press reports, (and the role of the bourgeoisie in other revolutions) it won't stay very long.

AN IMPORTANT BIOGRAPHY

Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels, by D. Riazanov. International

Publishers. $2.50.

Many characters on the surface of the European radical movement at the close of the 18th and the first half of the 19th centuries are brought before us in the vivid analysis of historic developments at the time. Not that all of the individuals are of such vast importance to us, but as molders of historic events and as precursors of scientific socialism they are important for a clear understanding of the move-ment. And Riazanov surely throws the clear light of Marxism upon them.

Marx came upon the arena of life with the French Revolution as a background. The capitalist economy which he is to analyze in the future is establishing itself through a series of revolutions embracing his youth and early manhood. The revolution of 1848 finds Marx a Communist. For just a few months before the conflict of that year broke out in Germany, the Communist Manifesto was published.

Karl Marx displayed the trend toward the materialist interpretation as early as his high school days. Not in vain was he bred on French materialism.

The movement for the liberation of the working class is far more The movement for the liberation of the working class is far more of a social consequence than the very immediate surroundings of the individual. While Karl Marx was brought up in the free spirit of the French revolution and the doctrines of materialism emanating from the same land, Engels, on the contrary, was raised in the midst of bourgeois mannerisms and religious narrowness. Yet, the labor movement was at its birth, the social forces were being released upon the road of clarification; and Marx and Engels approached and collaborated for the final overthrow of class rule.

Contrary to opinions held by many, Marx was not a cloistered thinker. He was not merely a philosopher but a revolutionist taking an active part in every struggle of the workers. Long before he was asked to participate in the proceedings of the League of the Just, there were many working class groups and organizations in the most important European countries which were initiated by him. He kept portant European countries which were initiated by him. He kept in close touch with them. Riazanov shows that Marx was not a closet theorist but was fol-

DARROW VS. DURANT.

"Is Man a Machine?" Clarence Darrow, affirmative; Dr. Will Durant, negative. League for Public Discussion. $1.

This is the stenographic report of a debate between the big lawyer from Chicago with the drooped shoulders, bored manner and drawling voice, and the author of "The Story of Philosophy."

Listening to this discussion might have been fairly interesting, at least when Darrow took the floor. But reading this embalmed collection of mutual genuflexions and impromptu wise-cracks is awful punishment.

Clarence Darrow likes nothing better than a huge, appreciative crowd before whom he can show off. He doesn't mean half he says. (He's been having a wonderful time these many years arguing the thesis that life's not worth living.) As far as Dr. Durant goes, the great advantage of reading his part of the debate is that one is relieved of the pain of listening to his ingratiating, nasal locutions for two whole hours.

Immigration.—In spite of much agitation for even more drastic regulation of immigration, the law as amended in 1924 still stands. The quota of which may be admitted from any country in a year is 2 per cent of the persons born in that country and living in the U. S. in 1890. Monthly quotas in general must not exceed 10 per cent of the yearly quota. The present quotas hold until June 30, 1927. After that date the total yearly quota is 150,000, apportioned according to the national origin of residents in the U. S. in 1920. Of the numerous laws proposed in congress for finger-printing or otherwise registering immigrants, none has yet been enacted.
